Poetry.

An Old Saying Amplified.

BY J. F. S.

The saying evident will prove,
To those who study human nature;
That "money makes the mare move"
With the mass of human creatures.

The intellect burn e'er so bright,
Its presence never is detected,
Unless it meet the human sight,
From burnished silver plate reflected.

Yes, genius in a cloud may stay,
While fools, disport in finest weather,
Money to greatness, paves the way,
Then hand in hand they go together.

And he who earns it not, is he
Who reaps in life the praise and pleasure.
One, toils for it most earnestly,
The other shows his golden treasure.

If man, to greatness would aspire,
Know all this rule, it is specific;
Before he compass his desire,
Of money he must be prolific.

No matter when, or how 'tis gained,
So he but have it, that's sufficient;
The only one who is disdained,
Is he who of it is deficient.

If one do steal, and wealthy grow,
His was a happy speculation—
But if ones poor we all do know,
He's never safe from accusation.

And if, when rich, his failings show,
By "kleptomania" he's protected,
Yet, is there any one who's known,
A poor man that way be affected?

No if he be but poor he'll steal
And justly merit degradation,
And all mankind gainst him will feel,
Deep and virtuous indignation.

No matter if he's poor, how true,
His ledger's balanced with Jehovah;
He is not known for from their view
Poverty's cloud his good deeds cover

But if he's rich, tho' ne'er so mean,
Men praise his deeds and well record them;
And if he has none to be seen,
They'll make him some, and then applaud them.

Selected Story.

How it Came to Pass.

BY MRS. M. J. SMITH.

This was how it came to pass: I had always bought my butter of Mrs. Butterworth, but now she had come to the city to live. So she of course must needs buy her own butter, for had she not called on me that very morning and made the startling announcement?

Now, George and I lived in a little cottage on Pine Street, and although four times a day he passed the grocery on the corner when going to and from his business, to say nothing of the times I went there to buy groceries, we had never bought one pound of store butter from said store, or, I might as well add, from any other. The very thought was repugnant. So the news of Mrs. Butterworth's removal to town fell on our defenseless ears like a clap of thunder in a clear sky.

"George, what are we to do for butter?" I said as we gathered around the dinner table, on which a small amount, of that article was placed.

"Why, Jane," he inquired, "what's the matter now?"

"Only this. Mrs. Butterworth has taken up her abode here in town, and of course we can get no more butter of her."

"You don't say so!"

"Yes I do; she told me herself this morning. And now what is going to be done about it?"

"How much have you on hand?"

"Only three or four pounds."

"Well," said George, "can't you skimp a little and make it hold out till I can look around, for you know I never can eat store butter."

"Nor I either," I said. So it was settled that we must skimp, but it was hard work. Butter had been quite an item in our family, and George Jr., declared that he would not eat anything if he could not have all the butter he wanted; and Mamie threw her thinly spread piece clear across the table, and kicked and screamed lustily.

Our little four-year-old was an active, energetic being, and George was a noble, resolut fellow. Husband and I had never punished the children, being determined that no restraint of ours should break their spirits; so we had a scene. Of course it was annoying, but my heart ached for the poor little dears, who never before had been denied that luxury, good bread and butter. Honey, sirup and sugar, though temptingly displayed, had depreciated in their eyes, and they had no appetite for anything else.

"What shall we do, George?" I again asked, as he was leaving the house.

"I don't know. Be as cheerful as you can, Jane, and I will see." So saying he slammed the door too, unnecessarily hard, I thought, and left me to cogitate the matter over alone, which I immediately began to do.

The farm was for rent. Mrs. B. had told me that, and now came a bright thought. Why could we not move out there this summer, and shut up our house in town, or rent it for the next six months? That would be just the thing. No more bills then for butter, eggs, chickens or fruit. In short, everything at hand; at no expense, except rent, which would be just nothing, compared to the amount that we now had to pay for these things.

I had always loved the country; it was such a pleasure to get out of the crowded city, and I had been in the habit of visiting Mrs. Butterworth twice a year, ever since I began to buy of her. How I loved to sit in he cool parlors, or watch her strain and put away the milk in bright tin pans. I never rose in the morning till the milking process was all over, but as the children needed the new milk to strengthen them, I used to cut my morning nap short, and hasten to the dairy with baby Maude in my arms, and my boy and girl following. It was trying to be obliged to do this, and I had hinted as much to Mrs. Butterworth, by asking her if she did not think if the milk was brought immediately to their rooms, and delt out so the children after drinking could have another nap before breakfast, it would be more beneficial; but that worthy lady insisted that the morning air was so invigorating, they ought not to be kept in their rooms later and so I became a martyr to early rising.

I used to enjoy lifting the churn dash for a few moments after the morning meal. It was almost as good as play until I began to grow tired, and then I would call my two romps, and catching up baby, go lie under the greeal apple trees till dinner time.

I was fond of Mrs. Butterworth, and two weeks in spring, when strawberries began to ripen, and the air was sweet with the breath of flowers, were devoted every season to visiting her. I always put off my house-cleaning till that time, for Maggie could get along so much better when we were gone, and it was so nice to get out of the clutter. I liked to spend the hottest part of the summer there, too. The perfume of new mown hay is always sweet to me, especially in the country, where one does not have to pay for it.

Mrs. Butterworth had other city friends, who, like myself, used to go out into the country and rest. You don't know how refreshing it was to us. We used to tell her so when we could get a sight of her face, for as we were always planning picnic excursions, sailing parties or rambling through the fine old orchard and garden, while she, dear soul, was busy baking and brewing, from long before we were up, till long after we were in bed, of course we could not see her as much as we wished. Housework seemed to be her forte. It did astonish one to see how attached to it she was. I used to say to her, "If ever I live in the country I mean to enjoy life. One can live so easy here. Nothing to buy, for everything grows here. Cows are waiting to be milked; one has plenty of cream and butter, chickens are coaxing to be fried, eggs lie all around loose and everything grows spontaniously!"

Mrs. Butterworth smiled a dreamy smile and said: "If it is ever your lot to live in the country you will see things in a different light, and you will find that all these things require a great deal of care. True, everything grows; but it takes a great deal of preparation before the ground is ready for the seed, and then it is work, and care all the way along. Hoeing, weeding, pruning and finally gathering, in fact it is all work, until ready for the table."

To return to my story. Now all my anticipations of rest, country shade, eggs and early vegetables had vanished. And looking out of my window, I saw nothing but the wooden sidewalks and dusty streets. I have no doubt but my disappointment had as much to do with my unamiable mood as the loss of my butter, though I did not express it. I felt as if, somehow, I had been abused. What right had she to change her location and leave me and my precious children destitute of a resort from the cares and trials incident to a city life?"

"George," I said, as he came in to supper, "I have hit upon a plan. Let us go out and live on Mrs. Butterworth's farm this summer. It's for rent, she told me so this morning."

"Why not? Rent our house to Mrs. Livingston. She has no children, and will take good care of the rooms. Just say you will to please me. We can live cheaper, you know. Why, we can live for nothing—absolutely nothing! Besides," I continued, "you can come in on the cars in the morning, and go out in the evening. So you will suffer no inconvenience. And I'll make my own butter too, every pound of it."

"I don't know anything about farming," said George, "but I suppose it's easy to learn, and I could get a good man to come and do the work. I think it might be a good idea."

So we began to plan. We would have the flower beds enlarged, for Mrs. B. had scarce enough to keep her visitors in boquets, and I had sometimes imagined she used to begrudge the dear children the luxury of plucking her roses and tulips, and tearing them to pieces, though she must have known how much it amused them. Yes, we would have it all to ourselves now, and the little dears should enjoy it too, and no thanks for anybody.

After the children had all gone to bed for our house was never quiet till the time came, we sat down and talked away into the small hours, and then we tired ourselves.

Morning came at last, and George sprang out of bed shouting, "Hurrah for the country, with its pigs and chickens, and luscious fruits swimming in bowls of cream. Hurrah for the country, I say! 'Home-made butter and a dollar a day.'"

To the farm we went. It was a rainy day when we moved, but as our house was let, we had to go when the time was up. I did not know much about packing, and I did not begin that business till morning, so it was late in the day before we got started, and the coming family was moving in long before we left. A ludicrus picture we made, when one stowed away on the top of a pile of bedding, baby in my lap, the other two by side me, and George holding a mammoth umbrella over us. How it did drizzle, drizzle! We were all pretty well soaked by the time we reached the farm; but George tried to cheer us with visions of a warm fire, for had he not taken the precaution to pay a boy he met on the street the day before, to have the fires made before we arrived, and the teaketttle which was sent out with some provisions the day before, boiling? Alas, what was our dismay to find not only no fire, but that all the cooked eatables had disappeared. The house was as cold as a barn and damp enough to give any one the blues. Everything was drippingly, drizzlingly wet.

"Never mind," said George, "we will have a fire soon. Where are the matches?

Where were the matches, sure enough? Nobody knew; and after hunting long and ineffectually, George went to a neighbor's to borrow some. In half an hour he was back again, but as everything was damp it was a long time before the fire consented to burn; but at length the house grew warm, and fishing out some tea, bread and prunells we had brought with us, we made quite a comfortable supper, and then prepared to set up a beadstead. A damp mattress was thrown upon it, and damp pillow, sheets and cover fellowed. How I wished myself back again in my own little cottage.

In the morning what confusion was before me! Baby was sick, the two older children hoarse, and I felt as if I had been beaten. My flesh was sore, and not a joint in my body was in tune. Maggie, my heretofore trusty girl, declared the country was no place for her, so she left me on the first train for the city. Now here was a situation! George tried all day to get a girl for me, but failed, and we decided to go to work the best we could, for neither of us could say to the other, "I told you so," though I felt like a culprit all the time.

"Ho, hum! A bad beginning makes a good ending, so let us go to work," and at work we went, and ere long the house looked quite presentable, and we were thankful that nothing worse than bad colds and sore limbs followed our moving.

George had provided a score of milk pans, and when the milk was strained away, I prided myself on their bright looks; and began to see in prospect the golden balls of butter stowed away in jars for winter use. It was not long ere I found it was no childs play to lift the heavy pans up and down from the shelves, and it was something I could not put off.

In the city the water was brought into my kitchen sink, but now I had to bring it some distance in a large wooden bucket. We had a pig and as I had no girl I must feed it; the barn was some rods from the house. When strawberries came, for they did come at last, somehow I had lost part of my former relish for them. Cream had ceased to be a luxury. I had too much of the article, and as the strawberry beds were too wet in the morning for me to geather the luscious fruit, I found it no pleasant task when the sun was beating on my defenseless head. The children got dirty and ragged and hungry too sometimes, for the bread often gave out, and there was no baker or butcher to run to. Of course we tried to keep everything in the house. I tried to be a model housekeeper if ever a woman did, but it was hard work when my limbs were so tired that I longed to lie down anywhere, to have the sleepy children to bathe and put to bed. It was hard work to remember and set my bread in time to rise for baking next day. I almost wore myself out fixing up the yard and garden, and then my little darlings spoiled it, so I had no pleasure in it.

To add to my distress the neighbors were always singing Mrs. Butterworth's praises in my weary ears. "She was such a good housekeeper. Such an excellent manager," all of which I could not deny, having had ample chance to test her housekeeping qualities. George snubbed our city friends who were dying to visit us. The few who did come almost set me crazy. I had now succeeded in getting a girl, but like Mrs. Butterworth's she was always grumbling when company came.

I had no idea that it was so hard a matter to keep everything up in the country. The washings were no small item and I found some difference between doing the washings in one's own house, or having them done at a laundry; and oh, the piles of dishes, pans and jars! Jars that must be washed and scalded and after all my butter lacked the sweetness of Mrs. Butterworth's, and it took so long to bring it. No matter how tired I was, if I attempted to hasten the matter by making the cream a little warmer, the butter was white and frothy. I found it anything but pleasant to receive visitors, though I asked Mrs. Butterworth to bring her children and stay a week with me.

She came, but did not keep the breakfast waiting, but rose early, and having dressed the children, came down when the first bell rang. How much she assisted me. How kind she was. And one day when I was very tired, she came in and taking my work from my weary fingers, in a very short time performed the much dreaded task.

How grateful I felt! And then I told her all; how selfish I had been, and how disgusted I had become with myself.

"I know all about it dear," she said, "I have been a country housekeeper, and I know, too, that in spite of sun and shade, cool breezes and sweet flowers, the overworked housewife's arms will ache, and though she may appreciate all the beautiful surroundings and fresh garden luxuries, she cannot forget or throw off the load of weariness that almost continually oppresses her. You city folks look only at the bright side of a farmer's life, for I admit it possesses a very bright and sunny side; but it takes toil and care to make a country home habitable."

How humble I felt when she came and put her arms around me and talked thus. We sat there long, my true friend and I, she so noble and kindly in her manner, I so self abused. As I looked over the past and saw how selfish I had been, I could do nothing by way of recompense but make a clean breast of the matter. Thus was the bond strengthened between us, and instead of a week as I had previously arranged, I kept my kind friend with me over four; and oh, how much she taught me! How much joy and peace she brought to our household; and now that I have seen both sides of the country life, I hope I am better fitted to take up the many cares that beset my path, and perform them faithfully and earnestly.—Western Rural.

Railroad.

We are somewhat surprised to know that there are men living in North Carolina who oppose the building of more steamships and railroads, and the desire to do the business of the world with sail vessels and stage coaches. Such men should take a trip to the New England States, as to the great West and North Western States and see what railroads have done to build up and develope the vast resources of our country. The railroads of the world are its highways, and are as necessary to the every day wants of its people as is the rising sun to shed its light upon the earth. Wherever a railroad is built, the price of land per acre is advanced in value. The farmer is enabled to get a larger price for his crop, and he is enabled to buy his supplies at reduced rates. Time and money is weal

COME ONE! COME ALL!

THE QUESTION OF LABOR AND CAPITAL.

This question is now agitating the minds of the people in various sections of the United States and we regret to see that there is a disposition manifested to antagonize rather than harmonize the two. We believe that, rightly viewed, the interests of both are in entire harmony. This is to a stale and sentimental common place; it is, in our judgment, the one vital fact to the system, and is simply the key to the problem.

Capitalists are a sort of laborers; laborers are a sort of capitalist. Capital is labor accumulated seeking investment in its large way; labor is capital unaccumulated, seeking investment in its small way. As it has been stated by another: "A man who has labor to sell has just as many rights as the man who wants to buy it."

It is folly to expect that a fair settlement and adjustment—can ever be effected by one party acting alone. And an attempt of this kind has always caused trouble. All interests must consult and be consulted in a fair and amicable spirit. So long as capitalists confer only among themselves, and laborers only among themselves, they arrive at no good understanding. Each party confirms itself in selfishness, suspicion and injustice; each intrenches itself in a hostile camp. If either overpowers the other, there is no settlement; suppressed antagonism means war—is war. If Capital is forging chains for enslavement, why should not Labor be whetting knives for defense?

Now we urge that the true policy is for both to meet on common ground and consider common interests. Let them look each other in the face. Let each listen and learn, for surely each needs instruction and information which can only come from the other. Men dealing with men as men come to a rational result.

Dogs quarreling over a bone; swine crowding at a trough, beasts of prey springing upon the weaker creatures and sucking their blood, act on a lower principle. What can be so brutal, inhuman, ferocious as a working man's party, blind to everything but its own advantages, stung to madness by outrage? We know of nothing unless it be capital, equally blind, through greed and contempt, and therefore equally cruel.

We repeat it, that properly understood, the interests of both classes are in entire harmony. Let selfishness be displaced by justice and suspicion by confidence. Let rational remonstrance be substituted for supercilliousness and hardiness. Once meeting on common ground capital will become less scornful and hardfaced and labor grow less unjust and exacting, and the remedy for all the trouble will have been found.

A SUBJECT FOR THOUGHT.

In the Spring the farmer plants his crop; in the Autumn he gathers it, reaping many fold. He planted a small kernel; he gathers an enormous growth of stalk and leaf and ear. The grain planted in the earth weighed but a few pounds to the acre; the products of growth weigh several tons. Here an interesting question arises, and it is a question worthy of thought: What is the nature of this organized material which has so suddenly appeared and from whence has it come? Analysis of the corn stalks and blades show that water enters largely into the substance as a constituent, and then we find a little sugar, and small amounts of potash, lime, phosphate, silica, etc., and the remainder, the vegetable fibre, is principally carbon.

During the summer—the warm days and nights—while the farmer was attending to business and sleeping, the silent unseen forces of nature were ceaselessly at work in his corn field, and from earth and air elaborated this immense product of vegetable matter. From the earth has been pumped the water and the chemical salts, from the air has been isolated and appropriated the carbon; and all the complex vital processes, so wonderful, so incomprehensible, have gone forward without any aid from him.

Farmers! have you ever thought of it that you have much of your motive power, and the most of your manufacturing skill gratis? You arouse the slumbering forces of nature by dropping the seed into the ground, and then increase and construction go forward independently and gratuitously.

Elections were held yesterday in the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Minnesota, Iowa, and Wisconsin.

The city of Memphis is undergoing a terrible scourge from yellow fever. Her people are truly in a horrible condition and the ravages of death are enough to appal the stoutest heart. A writer says:

As yet there is no sign of abatement, but on the contrary, the fever limits seem rapidly extending, and the exodus of those that can get away continues by train, steamer, or other conveyances. There are so many sick that assistance cannot reach all, because the number of nurses is not adequate to the demand, and one grows heartsick and weary of the horrible details of cases of individual suffering that may be numbered by scores. In one house a little girl, 12 years of age nursed her mother until she died, and then the child went for a coffin, obtained the material for burial clothes, made them herself, and is now nursing her sick father and the remainder of the family. The undertakers have more than they can properly attend to and no longer move slowly through the streets, but drive rapidly with the dead.

The principles of the Republican party are "Addition, Division and Silence."—Democratic paper.

True, but not in the way you put it. It is in favor of adding to the blessings of good government, to the population, and to the prosperity of the country; to division of liberty and protection of the poor, the weak and the humble, and as for silence it is in favor of forgetting the past offenses of those who once tried to destroy the Union if willing to act the part of good citizens in the future.

We see that itjis the general opinion that times will soon be better—that as soon as full confidence is restored the money market will become easier and more favorable to the mercantile community than it has been for years.

CORRESPONDENCE

A Letter from Boston.

BOSTON, MASS., }
October 10th, 1873. }

To the Editor of the North Carolinian:

Our fisheries are now nearly at their close. We sum up as follows:

Cod fish successful—demand equal to supply. Mackeral short catch and price very high. Herring not plenty on our coast or Nova Scotia. Last reports from Newfoundland and Salvador, give only moderate catch, but good fish. The supply is short. The Bay of Isle, N. F. catch begins about November first and lasts till Christmas. The last year's supply was about 8,000 bbls from this source but this class fish are too fat for pickling and they are used mostly for smoking. Herring are scarce and high in our market. Herring and Mackerel have ruled high all through the catching season.

Boston finances are improving. The deposits in our Banks have for years averaged about Fifty Million Dollars but are now reduced to about Forty Millions. Most of our Banks pay currency in moderate amounts. With not a dollar of paper money, the country would be rich with its cotton, hemp, corn, wheat, beef, pork, butter, its forests and mines. With them, we can pay all the world, what we owe all the world. Money is artificial only crutches to facilitate exchange with, while, products are real.

Memphis and Shreveport.

We continue to publish from day to day accounts of the spread of the yellow fever in the Southern cities. Neither the progress of the disease nor the need of aid has, we believe, been exaggerated. Trade and industry of all sorts are almost immediately paralyzed in a town at the first advent of this scourge, and the poor, who are unable to fly, are thus left penniless, even if not attacked by the pestilence. Besides this more general necessity for aid are the wants of the families of those who have died—children suddenly left orphans in a community where all as suddenly find themselves in poverty and imminent peril. In the face of this great suffering, however, there is a certain warmth and cheerfulness in the reports of aid which has been sent to the scourged cities, and in the fearless confidence, too, with which they appeal for aid. Inconsiderate alms-giving is a practice we have always steadly censured. In the generality of cases the truest help which we owe to our weaker brother is to teach him how to help himself—not to degrade him into a pauper. But when that is impractical, when this brother calls to us like Job, out of a depth of loss which we have never proved, "Have pity upon me, oh ye, my friends, for the hand of God hath touched me," he should have the right to ask for help as one that claims his own. Is there not enough and to spare in his Father's house, and who are we that should keep it under lock and key?

We note among other contributions to the sufferers at Memphis, large subscriptions from the Jews of different cities, and we call attention to the fact simply as one notes the striking of a clock that marks the progress the world has made in time from day to day. A few hundred years ago, Christians in every country were burning and slaughtering the Israelites to force them to disgorge some of their hoarded wealth, only too lax, they thought in their charity, if the burning was not performed on a spit and the slaughter prolonged through hours of torture. To day, the Jew out of his abundance stretches forth an eager, saving hand to his Christian brother in his sore strait. We who profess to follow Christ should not suffer those who reject Him to prove themselves his most faithful disciples.—Tribune.

General McClellan and family, and Jerome Bonapart and family, of Baltimore, sailed from New York Tuesday, in the steamship Russia, for Europe.

The story that a Leavenworth father had offered $10,000 to any one who would marry his cross-eyed daughter, brought about 3000 strangers into that town in one week.

The chief engineers of the fire departments of the principal cities in the United States have been requested to attend a national convention to be held at Baltimore, on Monday, Oct. 20th, for convention on the best means of extinguishing fires.

A New York stock operator having become one of the corporators in a stock breeders' association out West, a local paper thinks that if the other corporators can feed stock as well as the Wall Street magnates can water it the enterprise will prove most successful.

THE MOST UNHAPPY PERSON in the world is the Dyspeptic. Everything looks dark and gloomy; he feels "out of sorts" with himself and everybody else. Life is a burden to him. This can all be changed by taking Peruvian Syrup (a protexide of Iron). Cases of 27 years' standing have been cured by it.

A terrible affair is reported from Schuyler, Nebraska. It appears that a young son of Mr. Fahey, living near Scuyler, who was subject to crazy fits, became enraged last Tuesday at some action of his sister and father, and struck the former over the head with a gun, knocking her senseless. He then tried to cut her throat with a hatchet, and afterwards he attacked his father and beat his brains out with the but end of the gun. The young man was arrested.

Morton, Rose & Co. have been appointed fiscal agents of the Department of State at London in place of Clews, Habicht & Co. The appointment was made by Secretary Fish some days ago with the approbation of President Grant. The Secretary telegraphed the fact to Minister Schenck, through whom the other Ministers in Europe were informed of the change so they might not as formerly draw upon Clews, Habicht & Co. for their quarter's salary due in October but upon their successors, who will also protect all the drafts drawn for accounts of the state Department.

A man in Pennsylvania has invented a rat-trap, that is made to operate upon the selfish passions of the poor rat, and lure him into trouble. A mirror is set in the back part of the device, beyond the bait, and as his ratship is out on a foraging expedition he espies the bait; at the same time believes his own image in the mirror to be another rat making for it on the opposite side. This is too much for rat nature to stand and be cool over, so he rushes for the bait and is caught, this is the theory; what the practice is we are not informed.

Live out of doors as much as you can. It is the place for a man to be. It is good for the health. A distinguished physian was in the habit of saying: "However bad the air may be out of doors, it is always worse in the house." It is good for the temper. People who are always shut up in the house are apt to grow fretful and peevish. They are prone to acquire narrow views of things, and to worry over trials not worth considering. It is good for the whole character—for strength, hope, patience and fortitude. It expands and softens one's nature, and makes us more charitable.

ASIATIC CHOLERA IN CHINA.

Almost every case cured with PAIN-KILLER.

DEAR SIRS: During a residence of some ten years in Siam and China, as a missionary, I found your Pain-Killer a most valuable remedy for that fearful scourge the Cholera. In administering the medicine I found it most effectual to give a tea-spoonful of Pain-Killer in a gill of hot water sweetened with sugar; then, after about fifteen minutes, begin to give also a tablespoonful of the same mixture every few minutes until relief was obtained. Apply hot application to the extremities. Bathe the stomach with the Pain-Killer, clear, and rub the limbs briskly. Of those who had the Cholera, and took the medicine faithfully, in the way stated above, eight out of ten recovered.

REV. R. TELFORD, Missionary in China.

DEAR SIRS: During a long residence in China I have used your valuable Pain-Killer, both in my own family and among the Chinese, and have found it a most excellent medicine. In the Summers of 1862 and 1863, while residing in Shanghai, I found it an almost certain cure for cholera, if used in time. Indeed, using it in a great many instances, I do not remember failing in a single case. For three years I have been residing in this place, more than fifty miles from a physician, and have been obliged often to fall upon my own resources in cases of sickness. The Chinese come to us in great numbers for medicine and advice. Though with us medical knowledge ourselves, the few simple remedies we can command are so much in advance even of their physicians, that we have almost daily applications. We allow them to come, because it brings us in contact with them and opens a door of usefulness. In diarrhea, colic, vomiting, cholera, coughs, etc., your Pain-Killer has been my chief medicine. Yours, very truly,

REV. T. P. CRAWFORD, Tangchow, China.

Those using Pain-Killer should strictly observe the following directions:

At the commencement of the disease, take a teaspoonful of Pain-Killer, in sugar, and water, and then bathe freely across the stomach and bowels with the Pain-Killer clear. Should the diarrhea and cramp continue, repeat the dose every fifteen minutes. In this way the dreadful scourage may be checked and the patient relieved in the course of a few hours.

N. B.—Be sure and get the genuine article and it is recommended by those who have used the Pain-Killer for the cholera, that in extrem cases the patient take two (or more) teaspoonfuls instead of one.

The PAIN-KILLER is sold by all the Druggists and Dealers in Family Medicines.

☞ Price, 25 and 50 cents and $1.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Cash! Cash!! Cash!!!

After this date I shall sell for CASH! I have made this change because I can no longer afford to sell on credit. I must sell for CASH because I can only buy for cash. I must sell for cash because parties who have had my goods will not pay. I must sell for cash because it is too much trouble to collect bad accounts and I must sell for cash because it is impossible to collect bad accounts. In making this change I am well aware that my sales will be curtailed; but I prefer to sell less and not be continually harrassed with an inability to collect accounts to meet indebtedness. I have tried plainly to explain my reasons for adopting the Cash system. Some of my customers pay well others do not, I cannot afford to carry the bad to save the good, as a whole I must discard all or accept all the conclusion is plain. I am engaged exclusively in the Drug Trade. I shall endeavor to keep a first-class Drug Store. I shall spare no pains to make it such, keeping pace with every modern improvement. I shall mark goods lower and shall use my best efforts to please. I shall endeavor to supply my customers with any goods not on hand in the shortest time possible. I am anxious to please and to sell you, but please remember I sell for CASH.

Iron in the Blood

PERUVIAN AN IRON TONIC SYRUP

MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low state of the system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

NORTH CAROLINIAN

WEDNESDAY, OCT., 15, 1873.

☞ TO NORTHERN VISITORS.☜

Elizabeth City is 50 miles South East of Norfolk, Va. Parties coming here from the North should take passage on the Bay line steamers which leave Baltimore at 4 P. M. every evening, and arrive at Portsmouth the next morning in time to connect with the Elizabeth City Steamers daily.

THIS WEEK'S ADVERTISEMENTS.

We call attention to the following new advertisement in this issue.

Notice.
Bankrupt Notice.
Dr. J. N. Batt Advertises Drugs.
The Old Merchant at the Old Stand!

Local and Personal.

☞ Judge ALBERTSON will hold Court in Hertford county next week.

☞ The Federal Court will be held here, commencing on Monday next.

☞ The latest quotations from New York are: Gold 108¼, cotton 18¼.

☞ The Baptist have an interesting protracted meeting in progress at their Church in this city.

☞ By notice elsewhere published it will be seen that application will be made to the General Assembly to amend our City Charter.

☞ A correspondent from Columbia, Tyrell County, writes us that there was a snow storm at that place on the 7th, inst. In various parts of the North there were severe snow storms about that time.

☞ The Executive Committee, in making up the Premium list, did not intend to limit the articles to the list as published. They could not name everything but they do want everything brought. Let everybody having articles bring them to the Fair whether they are named on the list or not. They will be properly noticed.

☞ With the willing hands of the fair to assist the Managers, the coming Fair will be a fair affair. Aye more than that; with their contributions and with the attractions will be such that hundreds who would not pay their fare to come to the Fair will be cheerfully induced to do both.

☞ The County Commissioners have addressed a circular letter to the Trustees of the several townships of Pasquotank, insisting upon their taking immediate action to secure a better condition of the roads and bridges. This is a move in the right direction, for it is high time better attention was paid to these matters. They have been neglected to an almost criminal extent.

☞ A correspondent from Beaufort County informs us that the cotton has been damaged to a very great extent, both by the excessive rains in August, and the caterpillar since September set in. He says that most all of the large farmers are complaining of the caterpillar; that some plantations have been literally swept, not leaving a cotton leaf. This destructive worm has never been known to be so general as this season.

☞ The Managers of the Atlantic Coast Railway desire it to be distinctly understood that they do not intend to take any part toward influencing the action of the Commissioners or the vote of the people of Camden county on the county Bond Subscription. They propose leaving the whole matter to the Commissioners and the citizens of the county. They desire no contest, no bitterness, no hard feelings. They mean business and they expect to quietly pursue it in an inoffensive and legitimate manner.

☞ Facts are always to be relied on and truth never deceives; but some men's reasoning have not the strength of a spider's web. It is easy to lead men by a hair along the road they ought to go; but not if they resist. Deal honestly and fairly with all, endeavor to conciliate and convince instead of attempting to coerce, and you will be less apt to be obliged so often to "chew the cud" of defeat. The NORTH CAROLINIAN hath spoken! This is our response to "LOGUS."

☞ The private subscription to the railroad in Chowan and Perquimans are being rapidly made. Those demanded of Camden and Currituck are now assured. During the next two weeks a canvas will be made to raise the balance required of Pasquotank. The work on the road will commence at this place and from present indications we think it will begin not later than the 1st of December. We are glad to know that the feeling in favor of the enterprize is increasing, many who at first were opposed to it subscribing to the stock.

Business Locals.

☞ Remember that it is only three weeks to the Fair. Let everybody get ready for it, and bring something. No matter whether the article you have has been named in the Premium List or not bring it along and it will be received and entered and, if worthy, will be awarded a premium. This is a home institution; let us make it a success. We can if we will. And from the feeling manifested, both in town and in the country, we believe that all the people are going to do what they can.

☞ The holding of our Agricultural Fair will date a new era in the history of this Albemarle section. It cannot fail to result in good. The universal testimony has been that where exhibitions of this kind have been held the public taste on the subject of farming has been improved; that increased attention has been given to the mode of cultivation and to farm implements, and that increased production has been the result. Ambition has been excited to procure and excel in improved stock, and valuable acquaintances have been formed and an important lesson taught those who would be prominent—that as in mercantile life, mercantile integrity is synonymous with mercantile prosperity, so in agricultural life, industry, probity, and intellect are necessary to position and influence.

☞ From the last issue of the Wellsboro, Pa., Agitator we clip the following notice:

Mr. F. D. Bunnel, of this village started his herd of blooded cattle and a number of good horses for the South last week. These fine animals will attract attention wherever they go. The cattle comprise beautiful specimens of Devon and Ayershire blood, while the "Prince of Wales" will make himself favorable known to all lovers of good horses who see him. This valuable lot of stock was driven to Williamsport on the hoof, from that place the animals will be sent to Elizabeth City N. C. by rail.

We understand the Major has gone to the State Fair at Raleigh.

☞ The Herrington Creek bridge and road leading to the Fair Grounds have long been an "eye sore" to good taste and public convenience. It is now a road much traveled and on public occasions is attended with danger in passing. It is too narrow. It should be widened. It having been decided to hold a Fair here this fall the Managers felt it to be especially important to have the improvement made. They induced the Township Trustees to examine it and they reported that it was necessary. A Committee of the City Commissioners made a similar report. The estimated cost is $150. The County Commissioners made an appropriation of $75 toward the expense, the balance the corporation will assume. When the work is done we will have a pleasant and safe drive to and from the Fair Grounds.

☞ Compositors often make blunders. The effects are sometimes ludicrous, and they are sometimes (don't) very melancholly. We have heard or read of a compositor who made a dancing master present his most respectful thanks to all those who had favored him with their patronage. We have read of another who made a steamboat be maimed by colliding with a rat. An Ohio compositor once made his employers, the editors, announce to the country, that the Senate of that State was destitute of honor, for which contemptuous language the editor had to apologize to that offended branch of the Legislature. Another compositor once caused an army to be described as being destroyed with great laughter. Of course the words to be substituted in these mistakes are, thanks, rest, humor and slaughter. We allude to these instances because in reading and correcting our own proof the drudgery of the work is often enlivened by a laugh as we see similar amusing blunders, and we are led to say that when they happen to go into the paper it is well for printers that mistakes are distinguishable from crimes.

☞ The Committee on Premiums for the Fair have had a number of suggestions made them—some practical and some to "add to the fun of the thing." A lady suggests that a premium ought to be announced for the best looking man, and a young gentleman insists that to add to the zest of the exhibition a premium should by all means be offered for the best looking young lady! To do either, the Committee find will be a difficult matter. As to the first, each one of them being particularly good looking men, they hesitate about offering a premium for which all of them might be induced to compete; and as for the second, just think a moment. The Committee on awards would have to be not less than three young men, and where can such be found possessing sufficient courage to incur the displeasure of the hundreds of very handsome young ladies sure to be there? We know of young gentlemen who would have no hesitation in walking boldly up to the cannon's mouth, but they would fly the track rather than undertake to canvass the merits of the young ladies or dare to decide on a question of such importance. We are satisfied that a Committee thus announced would fail to come to time and somebody might be disappointed.

LOCAL PORT-FOLIO

A lost art—domestic economy. An intellectual feast—the entertainment of an idea. "Types" of civilization—printers. Up to the sticking point—paste and glue. Treat everybody well—but not too often. Something the people feel an interest in—the Fair.

LOCAL BRIEFS.—The cotton-pickers are busy.—C. W. SMITH, of the firm of BRODRICK & SMITH has gone the Northern cities to purchase their Fall and Winter Stock of Goods.—Dr. I. T. ANDREWS has returned.—The contract for lighting the Street Lamps has been awarded to G. M. JENNINGS.—S. WEISEL has returned from New York with a choice lot of New Goods.—The weather is delightful.—Let all our people get something ready for the Fair.—Our streets are being put in excellent condition.—The Coton Gins are in operation at last.

"A new map of the city of Wilmington has been printed.

The Lunatic Asylum at Raleigh is over crowded.

The track of the North Carolina Central Railroad has been completed to Wadesboro.

Dr. Sale, who died recently, was the last of four clergymen who have held successively the Vicarage of Sheffield, England, during the pas 160 years.

A large emigration to this country from the Nepolitan provinces is causing great disquietude to the landed proprietors of Southern Itily. The class of small farmers, and consequently a large quantity of land is left without tenants.

There has been frost enough in Wisconsin, says the local papers, "to take the bark off white oak fence posts." In the winter that frost is doubtless severe enough to cut the fense posts into stovewood. Farmers who have buckwheat fields thereaway say it will "take greenbax to get slapjax this year."

The Washington Star say: One of the best evidences of the healthy condition of things notwithstanding the late financial flurry, is the fact that our exports to Europe just now are heavier than ever before. The exports from New York for the week which ended the 7th instant, were the highest on record, being $8,378 130, mixed values, which is an increase over the previous week of $1,883,189. The exports for the corresponding period of last year were $4,173,438, and for 1871, $5,598,596; all of which indicates that the flow of money from Europe to this country is greater than it has ever been before.

Commodore William Jameson of the United States Navy died at Alexandria, Va., on the 7th inst. He was born in that State in 1791, and was appointed midshipman from the District of Columbia in 1811. During the war of 1812-14 he was in several engagements, and received his commission as Lieutenant in 1817. He attained the rank of Commander in 1837, and of Captain in 1844. He was faithful to the Union cause at the outbreak of the Rebellion, and was commissioned as Commodore July 16, 1862, but being disabled for active service by an affection of the eyes, he remained at Alexandria during the war, and was subsequently placed on the retired list.

NATURAL DECAY—PROTECTED THE SYSTEM.—The human body is a machine, and its decline cannot endure for ever; but, like a watch or a sewing machine, it will last much longer if properly regulated and duly repaired, than if no pains were taken to keep it in order. The great object of every one who desires a long and healthy life should be to put his body in a condition to resist the life threatening influences by which we are all more or less surrounded; and no judicious and corrective at present known so effectually answers this purpose as the vitalizing elixir which, under the unpretending name of Hostetter's stomach bitters, has been for more than twenty years the standard tonic of America. In crowded cities where the atmosphere is contaminated with the effluvia inseparable from large populations; in marshy regions, where the soggy soil reeks with miasma; on the prairies and in the forests, where every fall the air is tainted with exhalations from rotten weeds and grasses, or decomposing leaves—in short, in every locality where the malaria exists, this powerful vegetable antidote is urgently needed. Fever and ague, bilious fevers, dysentery, congestion of the liver, jaundice, rheumatism, and all diseases which are generated by infected air, impure water, or sudden changes of temperature, may be averted by strengthening and regulating the system in advance with Hostetter's Bitters. Autum is always a season of peril, especially to weak, susceptible organizations. Even the more vigorous are apt to be in some measure depressed by the humid atmosphere, loaded with deleterious gases produced by vegetable decay. The fall is period of the year when the renovation and regulation of the living machine is peculiarly important, and the Bitters should therefore be taken daily at this critical season.

Concerning Cotton Seed.

Why is it that cotton in the seed is not baled and sent to market in the seed? What are the seeds worth at the great manufactories in Europe and America? Can they not be utilized there profitably, will they not pay in various ways—as in oil in animal food, and as a fertilizer? Will it not pay in the large manufactories to attach the necessary machinery for picking, or have the picking done by separate machinery in the same vicinity. I suppose that the material question [illegible] additional [illegible] as well as by water—that [illegible] are to a great extent neutralized and unfounded. Besides, the raw material could and would be sold cheaper, as to seed, textile, or lint weight, than it now is. Every producer, under the present plan of ginning and baling at home, when his crops reach as high as 40 bales yearly, finds it to his interest to have a gin house, gin, and press of his own; and these, with the necessary mule or horse power to propel the same, will cost him some $2,000, and are not really and legitimately used more than two months in each year (in ginning time only), and for the remaining 10 months a deal of capital is only dead, but subject to deterioration from the weather, fire, and [illegible] which could and be reduced to less than 20 per cent. per annum on original further, in case of ginning and baling, to these saving of gin, in one fifth, or ten per cent. on the cotton ginned and baled; and further in the saving of the cost of human labor and of stock and food for the same. These and other items that could be mentioned, are worthy of consideration; and further, the producer would get through his crops some two months sooner, thus enabling him put all his farm or plantation matters to rights, for another, a larger, and better crop the next year.

The writer of the foregoing does not now remember to have seen this subject mentioned in any periodical. He believes it is worthy of full investigation, and this paper is intended only to open the subject, that others may amplify.—Silver Mission Station, Travis Co., Texas.

Comments by Prof. H. E. Colton.

In the original demand for the product of the cotton plant the lint was all that was desired and the seeds were looked upon as a waste and an incumbrance. Hence ingenuity produced the gin to be used on the plantation, and commerce became accustomed to transport the lint alone. At the present day it is not unusual to find one ship loading with the bales of cotton lint, and a few wharves distant another loading with the cotton seeds. The demand for those seeds for the production of oil has caused this, but freights are so high that it will not pay to transport them any great distance, and only the absolute needs of some oil factory now induces the shipment of the seed in the hull. It is stated that every factory which has done so in the Northern States has failed, or has had to abandon it and go South to manufacture the crude oil. This is the proper plan, as cost of transportation is saved on a large lot of matter which would nearly be waste in New York. The hull comprises one-half the weight of the seed after ginning, and about one-third of the lint in the "ball"; the hull is of no value, except for its ashes, and would be a costly fuel in New York, even in competition with high priced coal; the kernel in the hull is of value for oil-making; it, with the hull, makes about two-thirds the weight of the lint as it comes from the boll; hence, to send a bale of lint and seed to New York freight would have to be paid on one-third which was of no value, and on another third or one-fifth the value of the lint. In other words, to get 600 pounds of lint cotton to New York, freight would be paid on 200 pounds of dead matter, and also on another 200 pounds of matter worth only three cents a pound when cotton is worth fifteen cents. Again, if such a system of shipment were to be adopted, the manufacturer who uses 5,000 bales lint per year would have to buy 15,000 bales of seed cotton, would be compelled to have apparatus for ginning, hulling and pressing the seed, as well as for refining the oil, thus involving great expense and a complication of business. It is evident that our Texas friend's plan will not be adopted until ships and railroads beg for freight at much lower prices than at present. And even then it is a plan which would eventually work greatly to the disadvantage of the Southern planter.

The true course for the people of the South is pursue is to erect mills and convert their cotton seed into oil. The hulls make an ash very rich in potash, which, when mixed with the cake, from the oil-making, and a little ground bone of superphosphate gives a very superior fertilizer. Such a mixture has increased the yield of cotton from one-third to one-half. The cake also has great value as a food for stock. Many planters in the South return the seed, as ginned, to the soil, sometimes in a compost. This is better than sending it abroad, but in every ton of seed so used about 35 gallons of oil is literally thrown away, which would sell for about $12. Hence, instead of urging a new system of packing and transportation our live Texas friends should go to work stir up his people to erect factories and work up their seed. Instead of tearing down the gin-house add to it a linter, a huller, and a press, or encourage some capitalist to erect such a factory, and the planters would soon find that he would be glad to gin their cotton for the seed or at a greatly less toll than one-tenth. Such an arrangement is already in practice in some of the oil-mills of Mississippi and Tennessee.

What a noble animal the dog is! What a creature to do things! In Oregon, Ill., is a large Newfoundland character of a strong agricultural turn. The other day he pulled up all the potatoes. Then to the heap of potatoes he added a number of muskmelons. Then he proceeded to gather in the cucumber crop; but at this stage of his agricultural exertions he was caught and tied up. Anxious to be once more among the beloved vegetables, he soon released himself by gnawing the rope; and now languishes at the end of an iron chain. His master has advertised him to let him to any body wanting assistance in potato digging and fruit gathering.

Joseph Harris says American farmers spend labor enough in many cases in preparing for wheat, but rarely give time enough. To plow twice in two or three weeks, and harrow and roll until the land is as mellow as a garden, is not the way to secure a good crop. The same amount of labor expended over a longer period would produce far better results.

When a farmer boasts how much hay he sells, and how little manure he uses, he is simly stating that he is going to ruin as fast as he can.

BANKRUPTCY.

THE FIFTY PER CENT. CLAUSE.

As there seems to be a misunderstanding in regard to the effect of the provision of the Bankrupt Act, commonly called the 50 per cent. clause, we publish the following extract from the Act:

The second clause of the tairty-third section as amended by the Act of July 27, 1868, provides "that no discharge shall be granted to a debtor whose assets shall not be equal to fifty per centum of the claims proved against his estate, which he shall be liable on the principal debts, unless the assent in writing of a majority in number and value of his creditors to whom shall have become liable as principal debtors, who shall have proved their claims, filed in case at or be fore the time of hearing such application for discharge.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled—that the provisions of the second clause of the thirty-third section of said act as amended by the first section of an act in amendment thereof, approved July 27, 1868, shall not apply to those debts from which the bankrupt seeks a discharge which were contracted prior to January 1st, 1869.

The true meaning is not that a bankrupt must be able to pay fifty per cent of his debts, before he can obtain a discharge, as many believe; but that his estate, in the hands of his assignee, at the time of the discharge, must be equal, to fifty per cent. of the amount of the debts.

1. That he owes as principal;
2. That have been proved against his estate in bankruptcy; and
3. That he has contracted since the 31st day of December, 1868.

Or, if a majority in number and value of those who have proved their debts, to which the bankrupt is indebted as principal, on debts contracted subsequent to Dec., 31, 1868, consent in writing to the discharge—such bankrupt may be discharged forever from all his debts.

If a debtor, owing three thousand dollars principal, twenty five hundred of which debtedness was contracted prior to January 1869, and five hundred subsequent to that time, files his petition in bankruptcy, and all creditors prove against him, and there are no assets in the hands of the assignee, the petitioner will be entitled to a discharge; but it will be a bar only to the debts contracted prior to January 1, 1869.—If no creditors prove, the discharge will be good against all, whether contracted before or after January 1, 1869.

The practical effect in bankruptcy cases generally is, that creditors fail to prove their debts, finding it ordinarily unprofitable. They have had, in a large majority of instances, heretofore the trouble and expense of making proof without receiving any return. The 50 per cent. bugbear, therefore when viewed in the light of the law and common-sense, disappears.

EXEMPTIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

The exemptions under the 14th section of the Bankrupt Act are as follows:

1. Household and Kitchen furniture to no amount not exceeding $500,00
2. Wearing apparel of Bankrupt and family.
3. Uniform, &c., if he has been a soldier in the United States Army.
4. Personal property of the value of $500 to be selected by the Bankrupt.
5. A Homestead and the dwelling and buildings used therewith, not exceeding in value the sum of $1000,00; or in lieu thereof, any real estate in any city, town or vill age not exceeding in value the sum of $1000,000.
6. The reversionary interest in the Homestead lands.

In laying off the Exemptions in some Districts, the Assignees are ordered to accept and abide by, any assignment of homestead which has been made by a Sheriff under the State laws; or which has been assigned upon the application of a debtor in accordance with the laws of North Carolina. Where no such assignment of homestead has been made, the assignee will proceed to set apart such homestead, and make the other exemptions according to the rules of the bankrupt Court.

The report of such exemptions when made by the assignee can be excepted to by the bankrupt or by any creditor, within twenty days after the allotment of such exempt property.

EFFECT OF THE DISCHARGE IN BANKRUPTCY UPON JUDGMENT.

It is the opinion of many of our best lawyers that the discharge in bankruptcy, discharges judgment debts existing against the bankrupt at the time of filing his petition, and that therefore the liens existing by virtue of such judgments, upon homesteads are wiped out, and cannot afterwards be enforced. In this that the practical effect of the discharge, is to leave a man, whose homestead was encumbered by judgments, free from all his debts, of every nature, and the owner in fee simple of such homestead.

Again many lawyers, equally prominent in the profession, are of opinion that such will not be the effect of the discharge. That the homestead, will still be liable under the judgments and that when it determines under the State laws, the judgment creditor may enforce his lien and collect his debts.

To place this matter beyound doubt, the following rule has been adopted for the benefit of petitioners who are not willing to run any risk.

That the petitioning debtor may file a petition in the District Court, addressed to Hon. Geo. W. Brooks, asking that the judgment creditor, or creditors, show cause why the liens existing in pursuance of their judgments should not be adjusted by said court, and their present value ascertain and fixed, and the amount when so ascertained, to be made the true value of such lien or liens by the decree or judgment of said District Court, in bankruptcy.

The right to adjust such liens, is exercised in pursuance of Sec. 1. of the Bankrupt Act.

FILING PETITIONS AND SCHEDULES.

Petitions and Schedules must be in duplicate. Petitioner should sign each sheet, except the schedules. It is not necessary to fill out all the sheets of schedules that are not used. All papers filed in bankruptcy must be sworn to before a Register in Bankruptcy, U. S. Commissioner, or Clerk of the court.

The following deposit to secure costs is required at time of filing Petition: Register $10, Clerk $20, Messenger $5. Bankruptcy blanks can be had of M. B. Cuthbert, Printer, Elizabeth City, prepared in sets for Two Dollars per set.
